CALHOUN CEMETERY - Located at Calhoun, Mo.

The Calhoun Cemetery is located at the south edge of Calhoun, Mo. on Highway V, the right hand side of the road going south. It is a well kept little cemetery on rolling land with an abundance of beautiful hard maples. Like most, it has many unmarked graves and many marked with metal markers which are no longer legible. There were a few stones so badly weathered as to be impossible to read.

Calhoun in the 1830's was the largest town in the county due to the presence of clays suitable for the making of jugs and other vessels. After the discovery of a mechanical way to make these items at other places the town declined and was surpassed by Clinton which acquired the county seat and by Windsor to the east. Present population is around 300.

The age of the cemetery has not been determined. The earliest death dates seems to be 1846 but could have been moved in at a later date. There are several in the 1860's, a few in the 1850's; most from 1870 on. There seems to be an unusually large number of stones showing birthdates with the death dates blank, many of them being so early as to make the possibility of being still living extremely unlikely. There also seems to be a larger than usual number of war veterans buried here.

What is perhaps the most unusual stone there is made of metal, a metal sheath slipped down over a stone shaft. The metal cover is not a home made affair but carries a patent date of 1894. There is a metal plate screwed on which carries the vital statistics on one side and on the opposite side is a little door which opens up to reveal a picture of the occupant, complete with complete obituary and verse. Her name was Cora Madden, 29 years and 24 days, wife of Samuel Madden, daughter of William and Mary Stillings; she left a little girl 16 months old and was a member of the Methodist Church in Leavenworth, Kansas. Mrs. Madden died October 29, 1899.
